According to the rumours to which we have alluded, and the state ments put forth by various correspondents of Portuguese journals, the Canton authorities have decided to attempt defining the actual bounds of Portuguess and Chinese jurisdiction. practical point of view.

The alarmist section of the Macao community seems to have made up their the most probable excuse for interference which could be put forward the by Chinese is the abuses of the coolie trade. Our own object at the present moment is not which complete and satisfactory action is being taken in certain quarters far distant from the Holy City, but, assuming the speedy extinction of that iniquitous traffic, to consider the position of Macao as regards China in a purely diplomatic point of view. The non-ratification of Sr Guimaraes' Treaty has, although fully justified by the nassionate and injudicious behaviour of

ing the ratification, resulted unsatisfactorily for both China and Portugal. While we fully share the indignation expressed at the abuses to which its government has hitherto permitted the shelter of its flag, we do not believe that it is likely that China would ever be morally supported, much less practically aided, in an attempt to re-possess itself of the peninsula though we greatly doubt if any active interference would take place should by any warlike operations short of capture. It must be recollected that Macao has herself wilfully alienated the respect of other foreign nations, and that the feeling of reprobation for certain acts so freely expressed in China has been shared and even exceeded by the Lisbon press, which has denounced the Portuguese Colony in no measured terms. Ou the other hand, were Macao formally acknowledged as Portuguese territory and Portugal and China brought into proper diplomatic connection, the past history of Portugalitself would give us confidence that abuses would be dealt with. But at present, there seems to exist only a sort of half-and-half feeling of responsibility for the acts of her Colony, much like that felt by England for the newly established factories in Hindostan, before the Indian Empire became an inseparable portion of the British dominions. It is therefore exceedingly desirable on all accounts that the uncertain position of Macao be as soon as possible altered for the better. The Chinese are ready to admit the fact of Portuguese possession and would, we believe, resign for ever al claims to jurisdiction, upon the official assurance of Portugal, backed by the guarantee of the other treaty powers, that the abuses heretofore existing should totally cease. It is perfectly well understood that unless backed by the great powers Portugal will get no consideration whatever from China. But to obtain their aid a totally new plan of negociation must be adopted. Whatever it was which struck the black man, it appeared that it came from themselves. Supposing that Marc Antoni threw the missile which struck the black man, that would not be manslaughter, if it were proved that he did it while defending himself; and the weight of syldence went to show that the attack was made by the black men, and that the white men were on the defensive.
